“ If you bring me a blue orchid, I'd marry you.

About

Cursed_Echo (Cursed for short) was a builder who helped Metro City then eventually built their own house and gazebo, settling down and not doing much besides getting married and making a home. The fact she was mostly silent meant that she heard a lot, mostly rumors and conversations of issues brewing in other areas. She concluded Metro was the safest and best place for her. After getting married, Cursed_Echo became Cursed_Willow and let Tangled_Echo, formerly Tangled_Willow, move in with them. After sending their fiancée and eventually husband on random missions to the nether and the far borders, Cursed finally achieved their dream of having all the blue orchids and eye blossoms they wanted. They only finally left Metro on the last day to meet up with friends and explore the festivities. A classic homebody.

History

Cursed_Echo was very lost when they joined session 5 and ended up being directed towards safety. They settled down inside the walls and helped lay out the protective layer under Metro City, and eventually the very dirt covering that foundation. A person who eventually gains a dual citizenship stopped by asking for blue flowers. When he next visited, Cursed gave him the flowers and they started talking, they joked and Cursed ended up asking for an Orchid if he found it on his journey, later she said she'd even marry him if he found one. Cursed continued on, building their house. He returned empty-handed and she asked for more impossible flowers. He returned with an eye blossom and she agreed to marry him (since the orchid was too hard for him). She then sent him for supplies from the nether and pale forest, and she used them to finish the house and gazebo, almost all the blocks used for the gazebo were brought by him. Cursed then married him and continued making some stone bricks and spying on peoples conversations. She spent the rest of her days wandering around and gossiping with her husband.
