About

Hey ! Im Goliath but you might know me as Faithful_Aether (Faithful_Heart before the wedding), im the leader (king) of Pyros, sentinel of Igneous_Dawn (the fire god) and a blacksmith level 5. This event is my best civilization experiment I ever had (over civlabs), I enjoyed play, talk and LARPPP with other players, I made friends and even a wife xD. I loved to play as a leader but im so fucking tired next event I won't be that important :0. Hope you all enjoyed playing with me because it was a pleasure for me ^^

-- Faithful_Aether --

Great fella, probably wouldn't have collaborated with the fire nation if he wasn't so adamant in helping us and charismatic; not only a great CO-leader but also a great friend, congrats on the wedding.

Also write more of your history :3 (i'll add some more later)

Fluffy_World--

My husband that spend most of his time on diplomatic trips, getting netherite with his homies and being in an homoerotic enemies to lovers relationship with a cat, 10/10 would recommend! Kidding aside, I'm so grateful I could play with you, as co-leaders no less! Next time tho, let's give up any responsability and not be important because it was tiring af <3

From your lovely wife with whom you had a lovely wedding, love ya~~

About

Hey ho~! I'm Raïm, also known as Warming_Heart (previously Aether) and I'm the Queen of Pyros and the Apostle of Igneous_Dawn, our mighty Sun god! (Most might know me as the gal that had a wedding tho lol) I was so happy to be part of this event and meet all of those incredible people, first time I larpd that much too so it was AWESOME! So happy for the opportunity to lead that my civ gave me, for that incredible wedding that gave me an incredible husband and for the opportunity to represent something greater than myself by being a god's apostle.

Anyways, thanks everyone for the great times! See you all under the sun and may the eternal flame be with you!
Peace out! o/

About

Hello !! This event was super fun, despite my lack of 'live larp' it was a wonderful and very creative take on how general Civ events go on. I'm so happy to have been found by Pyros, The Fire Nation with the thanks of the wonderful Igneous_Dawn !! Everyone has been super welcoming and patient with my slow upbringing (SORRY AND THANKS WARMING_HEART AND FAITHFUL_AETHER LOL) , I'm glad to be a provider of cooked fish and kelp blocks, esp with the help of my hypemen, Shadowed_jester and gentle_halo :) Thank you all for making this event as an amazing experience <3

About

The Fire sentinel, third in command of Pyros and he built almost every shrine for Igneous_Dawn

History

At the beginning of the Era, Rusty joined the Mine civ, since they would allow him to worship War. Later, during the construction of his first shrine, Igenous_Dawn appeared to him, Rusty was instructed to go to Pyros where he would reside for the rest of the Era. When the Ocean Civ attacked Pyros, he happily launched into battle, When The Fire Apostle, Warming_Aether died he as a brief bout of cowardice before regaining his courage and winning the battle with the rest of Pyros. During the war against the Ocean God, he happily fought against him (Rest in a puddle) He played the music at Warming_Aether and Faithful_Heart's wedding and had a stand at the wind festival.

A Quote from Igneous

Rusty, Although events transpired in ways that neither of us intended, I can only show my deepest appreciation that you remained faithful and used your inner strength and determination to protect the rest of the nation, both spiritually with great shrines and physically with powerful blows. Thank you, may a thousand battles be yours to display your unconstrained power in, Architect of War!- Igneous_Dawn

“ Regardless of religion, everyone deserves convenience, which is why we built the 7/11-"

About

Shadowed_Jester was a neutral-aligned character, notable for having a supporting role in several major events throughout the Pantheon of Gods event. Having not directly been involved in major conflicts, Jester's most prominent role was their attempts at bridging the gap between former members of Rapture and the rest of the nations, despite denouncing their god and heavily disagreeing with their original mission to slay all gods.

History

SESSION 1-2

Jester spawned into the world surrounded by players in the acacia biome, swiftly gathering basic supplies before moving to the plains biome in the horizon where they meet Lulling_Sunset and Endless_Night, their first allies in the event.

Soon after establishing an allyship with Lulling_Sunset and Endless_Night, player Golden_Pearl joined the game not far from the three, offering to assist those new to the system and help them get used to the world around them. A temporary base was created in the center of a large lake nearby, where many others would later seek shelter, including one Aquatic_Stream.

While gathering supplies for the civilization, Jester came across a player named Blooming_Astral, who would become a notable ally until the end of the event.

The community of survivors appointed Golden_Pearl as their de-facto leader, with Aquatic_Stream becoming a close second-in-command, who declared that the community of people would follow the god of the ocean, Exiled_Abyss. Daily prayers became routine, the community grew from a small group of five to a faction of 20 by the time they relocated to what became the first ocean settlement; Rapture.

Jester, however, did not pray to the ocean god. During every prayer session with the followers of the ocean god, Jester would secretly pray to the Lord of the Celestial Flame, the God of Red Sun, Igneous_Dawn.

“ Why do I always miss all the important events... Anyways I'm gonna go mining again, I will see you all in a few hours.

About

Head miner of Pyros and a faithful follower of Igneous_Dawn (Fire God) since session one.

History

Session 1

Solar_Celestial spent the majority of the first session scouring the lands for sugarcane and animals, praying to the Fire God whenever he had the chance. After almost 2 hours of roaming around the world, he felt satisfied with the amount of resources he had managed to gather and started heading back towards the world spawn in hopes of finding people to group up with.

Session 2

At the beginning of session 2, Solar_Celestial joined a group of people worshiping many different gods, that place would later become known as the Mine Civ. He spent the first half of the session setting up a sugarcane farm with the 2 stacks of sugarcane he managed to find earlier. After completing the farm, he started his journey on becoming a miner. The rest of the session was spent mining and telling the farmers to harvest and expand the sugarcane farm, since he really wanted a healer as soon as possible to make mining a bit safer.

Session 3

Solar_Celestial spent the first half of the session going back and forth between the mines and the civ, gathering a bunch of ores and food on the way. Solar_Celestial however was growing more and more dissatisfied with his civ as time progressed. During the 1 and a half sessions he had spent there, they had changed blacksmiths 3 times, making getting new pickaxes an arduous process. The sugarcane farm had also been neglected, crushing his hopes of getting a healer and blessed food any time soon. The turning point in Solar_Celestials life would come when he went for another run to the mines. On his way back from the mines Igneous_Dawn, the Fire God, appeared in front of him, telling him of a civ full of their followers. Being fed up with the slow progress at his current civ, Solar_Celestial decided to head for the Fire civilization, but not before grabbing some of the harvested sugarcane to take with him. After a long journey through the seas and rivers, Solar_Celestial managed to reach the Fire civilization, where they welcomed him with open arms. After giving the people living there all the sugarcane and ores he had on him, Solar_Celestial once again headed back to the mines.

Sessions 4, 5 and 6

The following sessions were rather uneventful for Solar_Celestial. He would spend his time in the mines, leveling up and gathering any resources he would find, only returning to the Fire civ to get new pickaxes, food and healing. During these sessions he managed to gather enough iron to gear up most people in the civ with full iron. By the end of session 6, he managed to reach miner level 5, finally becoming able to mine diamonds.

Session 7

During session 7, Solar_Celestial managed to gather enough diamonds for 2 full sets of armor and some tools. During this session however, the one and only blacksmith of the Fire civ, Faithful Aether, was unfortunately not available. Knowing that a conflict with the Water God was almost inevitable, Solar_Celestial was trying to think of a way to get the armor as fast as possible.

With no local option for crafting the armor, Solar_Celestial and Rusty Directive departed for the Life civ with the help of a guide named ??? to trade. In exchange for 2 stacks of iron ore, the Life civ lent Solar_Celestial the use of their blacksmith that was high enough of a level to make diamond gear. This marked the start of long and profitable relationship between Solar_Celestial and the Life civ. After the trade deal, Solar_Celestial returned to the Fire civ and once again headed for the mines.

Session 8

Session 8 was another rather uneventful session for Solar_Celestial. They spent most of the session in the mines, only coming back at the end of the session and finding out that a huge fight between the Fire civ and the Water civ had happened at his home, with the Fire nation coming out as victors in the battle.

Session 9

Since the librarian of the Fire civ had fallen in battle against the Water civ, Solar_Celestial once again headed for the Life civ. This time to offer his services as a level 5 miner, since he remembered that nobody there had diamond armor. In exchange for enchants, Solar_Celestial mined a bunch of diamonds that the Life civ had uncovered, but were unable to mine before. For the time being, Solar_Celestial decided to stay at Life civ and therefore became an honorary citizen of Life civ.

Session 10

Solar_Celestial spent this session down in the mines gathering as many diamonds as he could, since he was aware of the looming threat that is Water god and wanted to gear up as many people as he could before an all out war would break out.

Session 11

Solar_Celestial went back to the Fire civ in order to mine netherite with Faithful and Rusty.

Session 12

Solar_Celestial spent all of his diamonds and netherite he had aquired to gear up people from Fire, Life, Earth and Moon civs with diamond armor and netherite. Then they all jumped the Water god. The apostle of Water god was a harder fight than the god itself.

Session 13 and 14

Solar_Celestial mined more diamonds and netherite, travels the world a bit to find Faithful.

Session 15

Solar_Celestial and Faithful get full netherite, Solar goes around the world and to the festival, helps some dude get a netherite hoe.

Session 16

Festival, Faithful and Warming get married, Wedding gift gets stolen, Solar gets a dragon egg. More festival. LARP LARP LARP

Session 17

TBD

“ I'm so sorry, I never wanted this.

About

A foolish Builder who liked to believe everyone at face value. Gentle_Halo had simple goals at the beginning, they only wanted to build underwater and live peacefully.

History

Gentle_Halo started the few days with the people who would become the Earth Civ (I have no idea what the name of the nation was XD) Gentle_Halo, in fact did not stay at this starting Nation. Instead he want looking for people of the water, and ended up finding them rather quickly. At this time they had taken up a sky base slightly above a small lake, during this time Gentle_Halo was given the job of Builder. Exactly the job he had wanted. The starting Water Nation that soon would be called Rapture, moved to the ocean. Rather an island with a sky base over the water, and in said sky base Gentle_Halo would start leveling up their builder xp through smelting cobblestone into stone. It was rather rough food food during these days, as it was for many starting Nations.

After a good few nights & days had passed we the people start to get a hang of our food situation, and where able to start making shrines to Exiled_Abyss our Water God. (Will write some more soon.)
